

My First blog

Why am I writing my first blog at 50 years old? It's because God has changed my life and need to start sharing it with others. I grew up with Christian parents and grew up in church. I tried to live a Christian life but half assed it for 42 years. One night I watched a video on You Tube about a guy who was taken to heaven and hell. Long story short, the angel told the guy if he died right then he would go to hell cause he didn't forgive his ex wife. The man was also a preacher.

After the video was done, I thought about how I didn't feel like I belonged in Heaven and I didn't think I belonged in Hell. I thought about how I go to my earthy fathers house and let myself in and just help myself to a beer in the refrigerator. I didn't feel comfortable with the thought of letting myself into Gods house and grabbing a beer in his fridge. Would God be happy to see me in his house? I knew the answer was no. This started my journey to know the person I had called father for 42 years.

I had a free PDF of a book called 'Soak in my love my bride'. It had been on my computer for about a year. I finally read the book and I practiced the exercises in the book. That PDF is included in the library on this website. Around this time I also discovered "door closing prayers" also included in the library. Those two things showed me a glimpse of what the Christian life could be!

After a couple of years I decided to go back to church. I was shocked at how many people in church have never heard God's voice. This website goes into how I learned to hear God's voice and I hope it helps people to be able to have a relationship with the Holy Spirit!

Too bad God doesn't have a refrigerator or beer, cause I finally feel comfortable in his home and I know he would be glad to see me.
